

Félix Rabin – Pogboy – Song by song.

WALK:

So far in my life, the more music I played and the more I traveled the world and the more people I met. A lot of people. On all those faces and souls I once met, I could read and guess what some of them had to go through. This song is an ode to all of you, of us. Never stop walking.

MOVING ON:

This is a song about me, a girl, and moving forward. You all know the drill.

SAY:

I believe we all tend to lie to ourselves from time to time, and it reflects in what we may say or ask to each other. Knowing the truth doesn't mean we will take it and sometimes, lies are more comfortable than the truth.

ANGELS:

If you ever felt like someone had you under their charm... well this is my song about it.

DEATH:

It all started when I discovered this poem from Clarence E. Flynn a few years ago, which hit me like no others every time I read it and that has been in my mind ever since. I never heard such reassuring, calming and peaceful words about Death. Eventually, we will all face it. So I wanted to get people to hear this poem, so that maybe like me, those words would bring a bit of light and ease in something we all fear. And so this song was born.

GONE:

One day will come you'll feel she's changed. You will see it in her eyes, feel it in her touch, hear it in her tone. And then, she will be gone, to never come back.
